

Human-wildlife coexistence: attitudes and behavioural intentions towards predators in the Maasai Mara, Kenya

FEMKE BROEKHUIS, MICHAEL KAELO, DOMINIC KANTAI SAKAT and NICHOLAS B. ELLIOT

SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIAL 1 Semi-structured interview used to determine people’s attitudes and behavioural intentions towards predators in the Maasai Mara, Kenya.

Before commencing with the interview, please ask the person you are interviewing whether they are giving you permission to conduct the interview.

Has the person granted you permission to conduct the interview? Yes No

Information about the person who is being interviewed

1. Age/Age set:
2. Gender: Male Female
3. Education level: None Primary Secondary Tertiary
4. Main occupation: Pastoralist Agriculturist Businessman
Employed in the tourism sector Other_____
5. Religion: Christianity Muslim Traditional Other:_____
6. Do you lease land to the conservancy? Yes No
7. What conservancy are you part of?_____

8. Livestock mortalities and losses

In the last 3 months how many livestock. . . .	Cattle	Shoats
Died in total
Died due to drought
Died because of disease
Were lost and not found or stolen
Depredation

9. What do you do when your livestock has been killed by a predator?
 - Nothing
 - Chase predator away
 - Call authorities

Call predator projects

Kill predator

Other: _____

10. What benefits do predators give you?

Answer: _____

11. Do you think the benefits outweigh the costs of living with predators?

Yes No Unsure

12. Who do the predators in your area belong to?

Answer: _____

13. Do you think people and livestock should live alongside predators?

Yes No Unsure

14. Do you get compensated when livestock are killed by predators?

Yes No Unsure

15. If yes, who provides compensation? _____

16. Do you contribute towards livestock insurance/compensation?

Yes No Unsure

17. Are there any questions you have for us? Any comments? (Write them below)

This is the end of the interview. Please thank the participant for their time and collaboration.