THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

INTERVIEW OF NANCY CLARKE AND GARY WALTERS
BY DONNIE RADCLIFFE, WASHINGTON POST

MR. WALTERS: -- routine follows the one step (inaudible) the administration.

Q Okay.

MR. WALTERS: It's the truth. We are here as a service organization, and that's what we try and do. We don't do anything on our own. We represent the family. And that's all we want to try and do is represent them as best we can.

Q (inaudible) what are your considerations?

MR. WALTERS: Number of people.

Q Okay.

MR. WALTERS: That's always the first consideration, number of people, so that we can start the planning process. The date, time. Those are the -- in most cases that's what we are dealing with. Tell us the dates and the number of people so that we can start to develop a menu and present it through the Social Office for the First Lady's approval.

Q You mean approving?

MR. WALTERS: Mm-hmm. And then also the other things that lead off of that: The types of flowers that may be required for the table. What kind of table are we going to use. Specifically this dinner certainly may be a round table. That's all you can establish. What the decorations, the desire for the decorations might be.

MS. CLARKE: Any restriction --

Q Yeah.

MS. CLARKE: -- that we might have because of the country.

Q I am just so afraid that this thing isn't going to work, and that will be a disaster. So, like, if somebody had hay fever or --

MR. WALTERS: There are color restrictions by certain countries when you deal with foreign countries. Color restrictions and flowers and flags. There are certain flowers themselves that you can't use because they may mean something -- they may be used only at a funeral in the home country.

MS. CLARKE: (Inaudible) a lot of specific flowers for a funeral.

MR. WALTERS: That's usually a question that's very early on by the Social Office or the State Department to provide that kind of information.

Dietary restrictions. Are there any dietary restrictions, foods that may not be acceptable? Certainly, we all know that pork isn't acceptable to the Muslims. So there are things like that just follow a natural course.

Q Can you give an example of a flower that wouldn't be --

MS. CLARKE: Chrysanthemums. Most of the Asian countries, chrysanthemums isn't --

Q What is the reason?

MS. CLARKE: It's their funeral flower.

Q Oh, okay.

MS. CLARKE: Usually yellows and white are the two colors that are very highly restricted. Mainly white.

Q Mainly white?

MS. CLARKE: Mm-hmm.

Q Because it denotes death?

MS. CLARKE: Funeral.

Q Interesting. Any other restrictions or -- for example, numbers of people, the dining room, or however the First Lady wants it.

MR. WALTERS: It will only accommodate so many people.

Q What does it --

MR. WALTERS: Usually it's 130. And on the odd occasion, which necessitates moving the large pear tables that were built for that room in 1902, they can be moved down. They can accommodate 140.

Q When you say pear tables, you mean?

MR. WALTERS: The console tables in the room. That's on the north wall --

Q All right, yes.

MR. WALTERS: -- the marble top table has the eagle legs. And then there's two on the sides that we can accommodate 140.

Previous administrations, if you go back to the Nixon administration, they added tables in the Red Room in addition to the tables in the State Dining Room. So you have 160, people that were entertained. I think at one point Mr. Kissinger was in that room.

I think the Johnson administration even went and added tables in the Blue Room, 200 people. We had people seated in the Blue Room, the Red Room, and the State Dining Room.

Q And then what about the china? Who decides that? Is that the First Lady?

MR. WALTERS: Usually that's a decision that's made by the social secretary in conjunction with Nancy. And when we discuss the cloth that may be used and the kind of flowers. It's usually a decision that comes about because of the china that's most compatible with the tablecloths and the flowers.

Q Are these tablecloths ones that you have in stock and you just can go and --

MS. CLARKE: We have quite a few in stock. These particular ones for Korea are some that we have rented.

Q And that's because they go with the --

MS. CLARKE: They go with the flowers and --

MR. WALTERS: It's a different look.

MS. CLARKE: -- the china, and it's a different look.

Q Anything further on that? Do you have to worry about anything in the upstairs or the Oval Room where I presume the President meets his --

MR. WALTERS: Well, in this case, at this particular dinner, I think the plans now call for him not to go up there. So that's a decision certainly that we ask, is what is the tentative scenario. We don't know. So that's asked. That's the final decision --

MS. CLARKE: I don't know if it's final.

Q We will see that night.

MS. CLARKE: Right.

MR. WALTERS: So we get an idea --

Q We may all just come in and go right in --

MR. WALTERS: We get an idea of what the scenario might be because we do have to decorate the areas that are going to be used.

Q Then you have to take into account the entertainment, don't you, in the East Room, and how you are going to set that up?

MR. WALTERS: Yes.

Q And that would be determined by the kind of entertainer?

MR. WALTERS: Whoever the entertainer might be.

Q Are you saying yet who --

MS. CLARKE: Not yet. We know who it is but we aren't disclosing that.

MR. WALTERS: That determines the size of the stage, the entertainment, and the -- if it's a large band, certainly a much larger stage than a single entertainer.

Q And then you have to --

MR. WALTERS: So, then, we have to decide the kind of flowers that are in season, that we can put our hands on, or that we may already have through the National Park Service, so that we try and keep the cost to a minimum. That would allow us to then tell Nancy so that she can color coordinate with the flowers arrangements on the mantles, and also then we coordinate with what we are going to do in the way of decorations in the cross-hall and the grand foyer. Of course you have seen those different --

Q Yes.

MR. WALTERS: -- things that we have done, everything from the baby trees, to the hanging baskets to just decorating the trees --

Q How do you decide what you are going to do?

MS. CLARKE: Sort of what is in season. Some colors are in season.

Q This year, what will it be?

MS. CLARKE: By what is growing. Right now the fall colors are in --

Q Okay.

MS. CLARKE: -- the yellows, rust browns --

Q But you can't use yellow.

Q Can you use rust and colors of, tones of --

MS. CLARKE: You can use all those tones. Also, I try to tie my cross-hall grand foyer area in with whatever the Park Service has available. I am a little freer, color-wise, than they are because they always use the plants that they have. And then whatever they have blooming, I usually can tie in. I can always pick up a gerbera or a rose or something in many colors. And I try to do the same thing in the East Room once they determine what colors they are going to use.

Q And they will provide the big --

MR. WALTERS: What I usually do, is, I will ask the ground superintendent, who is a member of my staff, what would be available in the Park Service. If we have a lot of flowering plants, we might be able to do geraniums or cyclamen -- you don't know what's available and what's blooming at that time. And once he determines what they have available, then I usually refer to the social secretary and say, look, we can do X, Y and Z. Which would you prefer? And then she confers, I assume, with the First Lady.

Anyway, the word comes back to me that it's done for the First Lady. And we then decorate accordingly.

Q What's the timing on this? The day of? Do they bring all that stuff the day of? Is that --

MR. WALTERS: Usually, because we usually have the public tours --

Q Of course, yes.

MR. WALTERS: -- Tuesday through Saturday. Now, if it's a Tuesday, if the event is on a Tuesday, we could bring it in on Monday. We try not to do it on a time when it would cause us to do overtime. So we try and do it in conjunction with the tours or other free time when the House is not active so that we can get the plant material in. We might bring them in two days ahead, we might bring them in the day of. Majority of the times we bring them in the day of.

Q And it's after the tours -- is there a tour on that day?

MR. WALTERS: It will be a Tuesday.

Q It will be, huh? When does it end?

MR. WALTERS: I think they are doing an early press conference, press availability, at 12 o'clock.

MS. CLARKE: I think that's right.

MR. WALTERS: So the congressional tours will go from eight until about 10:15, 10:30. And the public tours will be cancelled that day because there is not enough time to handle both activities. And we have to start getting ready for the event that evening. So as soon as the press conference is over, and the people depart, we will start bringing the plant material. And then later in the afternoon will bring up the cut flowers to put in place. Someone will decorate the tables and --

Q I was going to say, then the tables. How long does it take to do the tables? What would there be --

MR. WALTERS: Actually, we will put the tables in for this dinner, Monday.

Q Oh, you will put the tables in Monday?

MR. WALTERS: I put the tables in the State Dining Room on Monday because there aren't any tours, there is nothing else scheduled. And we'll put the tablecloths on them and have them ironed. And then the butlers will start setting them up --

Q On Monday? Oh, no, on Tuesday.

MR. WALTERS: No, Tuesday.

Q Just the tables are set up. But the linens and everything go on --

MR. WALTERS: Each place setting at the table, it's about 18 items for each individual.

Q Oh, really?

MR. WALTERS: By the time you count all the silver, the glasses and the various plates that have to be placed. So it takes considerable amount of time.

Q How long do you suppose it takes per --

MR. WALTERS: About four hours.

Q Does it? To do --

MR. WALTERS: To set up the whole room.

Q Really? And you have how many butlers working?

MR. WALTERS: I don't want to be evasive, but it depends on the amount of time we have.

Q Okay.

MR. WALTERS: If we only have three hours to do it, we'll have a couple extra people to help get it done in time.

Q What can go wrong?

MR. WALTERS: If we have the whole day -- pardon me?

Q What could go wrong that would set you back in time?

MR. WALTERS: Other events that are going on. There have been times -- in this case we have a press conference that will be in the East Room earlier in the day.

Q And that's unusual, isn't it, because you don't usually have a press conference --

MR. WALTERS: No. I think the President has had a number of these.

Q But I meant in -- on this day?

MR. WALTERS: No. We usually have -- no, you're right. This is different for this kind of dinner. But then again it's not a state dinner, so --

Q Yes, yes. And then the china is chosen by the social secretary?

MR. WALTERS: It's been chosen sometime before that to allow us to coordinate the tablecloths and the flowers and the --

Q What are the services that can accommodate that many people? Are there only two or three --

MR. WALTERS: Yes.

Q What are they?

MR. WALTERS: Well, going back, chronologically, backwards, you go -- the Reagan china is the most complete china that we have in the House. You go back from that to the Johnson china. And those are really the only two services where we could serve a meal all the way through with those. The Truman china, we only have about 96 place settings of that, so we can't do a full complete dinner with that. Eisenhower, we are using the base plates. The Eisenhowers didn't buy a complete set of china. They just bought the base plate with the presidential seal in gold.

So, frequently we have been using the Eisenhower base plates and the other types of china. There is a mixture of Roosevelt that's been used, and some Wilson. Mrs. Clinton has chosen to use a lot of the other china --

Q Really?

MR. WALTERS: -- for interest of the guests so that people can have an opportunity to see the different pieces.

Q Because they weren't used all that much; were they?

MR. WALTERS: No. Something Mrs. Clinton wanted to do. She said it would be nice to get these things out so that people can take a look at them.

Q Do people worry they are going to drop them?

MR. WALTERS: I do.

MS. CLARKE: I do, too.

MR. WALTERS: But the fact of the matter is, it's china, and it's meant to be used. I mean, it wasn't bought to be put on the shelf. Now, there are certain pieces that we have where we only have a few left. Certainly we would want to keep those for curatorial purposes. But the rest of the china was bought to be used, and it should be used.

MS. CLARKE: Yes, it should be used.

MR. WALTERS: The smaller sets, that we only have small pieces of, are used normally for very small parties -- receptions, I should say. Or used up in the family's private quarters.

Q And then do you try -- you have to have some kind of center piece, table center piece. Do you have a particular theme that you work with?

MS. CLARKE: Well, Anne Starke (phonetic) and I talk about which tablecloths they would like to pick out, what Mrs. Clinton would like. And then we sort of pick a china that, based on the numbers, because like Gary said, we only have 96 --

Q Is it 220 --

MR. WALTERS: It was originally 220.

Q Is it down?

MR. WALTERS: Sure. Haven't you ever broken china in your house? It gets used, so there is breakage.

MS. CLARKE: And then Ann and I will talk about the flowers that are in season, or available that particular week, or the next week, whatever is going on. And I usually will do a sample for Ann. And Mrs. Clinton -- once Ann and I have agreed, if this is what she wants or what she likes, and then show it to Mrs. Clinton to see if it's all right.

MR. WALTERS: Mrs. Clinton has also chosen to integrate other pieces other than the flowers.

MS. CLARKE: Right.

Q Oh.

MR. WALTERS: For the arts and humanities function that we did not long ago, we had some Stuben (phonetic) pieces that were --

MS. CLARKE: Oh, that's right.

MR. WALTERS: And Mrs. Clinton has given us some indication that those are the kinds of things that she would like to do is integrate other pieces.

Q Worked in flowers?

MS. CLARKE: Right. Flowers, and objects of art, and --

Q Were those borrowed for those -- you just sort of send out a -- come up with an idea of what you want and then --

MR. WALTERS: The social secretary usually does that in conjunction with Mrs. Clinton. Determine what they might want to use. Then they borrow things. Other times, use things. It's hard to turn down the White House.

Q Baker would think it's so (inaudible).

MR. WALTERS: Well, we try to steer away from that because you don't want to commercialize --

Q No.

MR. WALTERS: -- the White House. And these were pieces that weren't specifically made for the White House. They are pieces that were in their general line. So there was no specific identification of those items were used here.

Q But it is good to --

MR. WALTERS: I think it's --

Q Tell me about the missing items. Do people sort of --

MR. WALTERS: No. I think the people that are invited to the White House take a great pride in the fact that the House belongs to all Americans, and they leave things as they find them. It's amazing to me that we don't have some people that -- you hear about hotels and people take towels and those kind of things. We just don't have that problem. I think it's the respect that people have for the house and for the family that lives here.

Q The menu cards are all meant to be taken; right?

MR. WALTERS: Yes. That's like the food. It's consumable.

Q I remember that Maureen Reagan would send around the menu card, and everybody started sending theirs around. They'd all autograph at the table.

MR. WALTERS: That's happened through various administrations. And people, as a souvenir, they pass their menu cards around and sign them. We try and dissuade people from getting up and walking across the room and getting the President and the First Lady to sign.

Q Have people done that?

MR. WALTERS: From time to time. Very seldom, but it has been done.

Q Good. Well, this is interesting.

MS. CLARKE: Yes. I am learning all kinds of things. I really am.

Q Anything else that you could think of that -- oh, you have to worry about accommodating the traffic that comes in --

MR. WALTERS: We work with the Park Service and the Secret Service, which gates people are coming in, and make sure that we have people there to greet them properly. And set up for the press --

Q Right.

MR. WALTERS: -- stands in various areas where people are, and try and -- as you well know, when guests come in the east side over there, we had a problem with the press trying to take pictures in the glass. So we wrote to the Park Service, and now we put plant material up on the inside so that the pictures come out a little bit better. So we try and work with everybody and make everybody happy.

MR. WALTERS: Which?

Q Is that a security curtain (inaudible)?

MS. CLARKE: The big white?

Q The big white.

MR. WALTERS: Oh, for when the press stand is put up out there. That's the only time that's up, is when the press stand is up, and the President is going out to greet a head of state at the north portico, that's put up on the back of that press stand for security because --

Q For security.

MR. WALTERS: -- I mean, let's face it --

Q Sitting duck.

MR. WALTERS: Well, it's usually a dark image against a white background with bright lights on him. Then you use a security column. The Secret Service asked us for a way to come up with some more security, just the visual. So that goes up only when the press stand is up out there.

Q And then the music is always the Marine band. Is that --

MR. WALTERS: Most of the time, yes, the Marine band.

Q And then the Strolling (phonetic) Strings --

MR. WALTERS: Strolling Strings have -- and Mrs. Clinton once again asked that -- kind of spread the wealth around a little bit, and she has used the Air Force and the Marines. And a couple of the other military groups have been in.

MR. WALTERS: Buschwald (phonetic)?

Q He alone?

MR. WALTERS: Oh, he takes -- the van is larger than what you see here.

Q Oh.

MR. WALTERS: And they take a group on tour, and they perform around the country.

Q Christmas is coming now --

MR. WALTERS: Busy time.

Q What else should we know? Got any ideas --

MS. CLARKE: I can't think of anything.

Q Gary, what do you think?

MR. WALTERS: No. The process, we have pretty much gone through from the beginning --

Q Yes.

MR. WALTERS: -- finding out from the State Department and the National Security Council that the President has invited a guest. And from there it's a process of just filtering down how many people are going to be invited. And then that puts the wheels in motion. And we take our cue really here in the House from the Social Office and from the First Lady.

Q You usually have how much notice, would you say, a month, two months?

MR. WALTERS: Usually on a major visit we have a month, yes. I think that's only courtesy --

Q Sure.

MR. WALTERS: -- that the President extends his invitations out that far in advance.

MS. CLARKE: And then to get everybody coordinated.

MR. WALTERS: It takes a while to put everything together. We are just the end result. What you see in state dinner is just the end result of everybody's efforts on the press side of the House, on the Secret Service, the State Department, the National Security Council. That all has to be running at the same time. So what you see of a state dinner is the culmination, which is what it should be. It's a celebration of the arrival of a visiting head of state.

Q I would like to ask him about the -- what is the difference between this kind of a dinner and the state dinner. Is it the ceremonial aspects that are on the south lawn? I mean, I am not talking about the protocol --

MS. CLARKE: The NSC is really the one who -- they are the ones who make that determination and can tell you --

MR. WALTERS: All we know is that we are going ahead with this dinner for a foreign head of state. What occurs, the trappings around it that make it a state visit as opposed to a working visit, as opposed to any other name you want to attach to it, doesn't really to us. These are guests of the President and the First Lady.

Q Oh, sure.

MR. WALTERS: And we are just going to handle it as best we can.

Q I realize that there is some sensitivity here, and I am simply trying to say that when I have -- in the morning there has been a ceremony of arrival, that kind of thing. Does that occur this time? Will the President meet him here for the first time when he arrives, when President Kim arrives, or will the President see him -- oh, he will, because he will be coming here for the first time. But it won't be a big ceremonial arrival; will it?

MS. CLARKE: I don't know the particulars of the arrival yet.

Q Okay.

Q Okay.

MS. CLARKE: -- or someone walk through what happens.

MR. WALTERS: This is not unusual from the aspect that there is always negotiations around a protocol event, which this is.

Q Sure.

MR. WALTERS: And that always takes place outside of the House here.

Q You are just following orders.

MR. WALTERS: We are just following through with what we are given. We don't get involved in that. I don't know what's going to happen with the other things.

Q So Sandy Berger is the one to --

MS. CLARKE: Sandy is probably the one. He is the one you talked to before.

Q Yes. He probably deals with the Koreans and --

MS. CLARKE: Sandy and Ann, you know, will have it down. And when Ann gets back --

Q All we need is the sittings.

MS. CLARKE: Oh, I completely agree. I completely agree. What is the definition of a state visit, what does that mean. I don't know all the particulars, but it's not just the head of state. My understanding it's a large number of people will come --

Q Oh, really?

MR. WALTERS: -- were the first ones that held it on the grounds. Before that the arrivals occurred at the airport.

Q The Secretary of State would go meet?

MR. WALTERS: Secretary of State. It's been defined. It's the protocol side of the House that gets involved in that.

Q Each administration or each president can define --

MR. WALTERS: It's the one thing that the United States government doesn't have, I don't think there is a manual. Each administration has the flexibility to define it the way they see fit. It's not like the military where everything is A, B, C, D. In the protocol area I think they can jump around.

Q They can bend the rules.

MR. WALTERS: Well, I don't think there are rules to bend.

Q That's right, they can bend them because there aren't any.

What is the protocol -- I have forgotten. One of these protocol chiefs -- hospitable or something.
